Dear Sirs at the Department of Justice,
I object to the amount of money and time that the Department of Justice has chosen to dedicate to the Microsoft Case. It occurs to me that Microsoft has spent large sums of money to provide products to the American consumer at competitive prices that the American public have chosen to expend. Not only are the products innovative but the selection of products make us the consumer more productive assisting us to be more efficient as well. My understanding of the proposed agreement judge it to fair, reasonable, but also hard-line. It also as reported by the press far exceeds the findings of the Court of Appeals. I contend that the American public would rather see American spirit and innovation be spent in the form of and on American products that are developed by Microsoft through research and development versus the contrary, the waste of taxpayer dollars and revenue on litigation. Other priorities are obvious and relevant.
Thank you for your time in reading this letter.
